To get started, enter your location or search for a specific agent by name.

2 | SOCIAL MEDIA PLATFORMS

You can also find real estate agents congregating on different groups on Facebook, which is also a good way to identify active real estate agents and initiate a conversation with them.

An easy method for identifying real estate agents in your area is by searching on Instagram and searching for #realtor #city name. Following local listing agents on Instagram and then waiting for them to follow you back and then initializing a one-on-one conversation with them on Instagram is a very effective way to start communicating with agents.

3 | CONTACT LIST SELLERS

If you just want a quick list of real estate agent contact information. There are many contact list sellers. Just Google real estate agent contact list Arizona or whatever area you are servicing. You might spend $100-$200 on a list like this, but it might save you a whole lot of time from manually looking up real estate agent information.

4 | CONCLUSION

From my experience, it is more effective to spend time building one-on-one relationships with real estate agents rather than sending a blanket email to many agents. Getting customers is a contact sport, and whatever you need to do to get out of obscurity and in contact with more real estate agents is how you are going to get your business off the ground and growing.
